Question 3 Part	Marks awarded	Marks available	Comments
(a)	6	10	The first set of points on war, pollution and lack of infrastructure as barriers to development are quite well made, but the theory needs to be improved. The point about workers emigrating has some merit, and this aspect is related to an aggregate demand/aggregate supply diagram, although the shift in the short-run aggregate supply is not quite correct. The next point on crime and violence has some relevance and is related to emigration. There is some limited connection to a fall in aggregate demand which reduces economic growth. Also, some theory and diagrams are provided to support the answer. There is very little on economic development however, and this is a significant weakness in the answer. Six marks are awarded.
(b)	6	15	The first section is based on the economic sanctions imposed on Russia and relates them to the diagram and the impact they have on economic growth. The theory here needs to be developed more accurately. The answer drifts to life expectancy in Russia and government spending related to the Ukraine war, but this is not really a clear economic barrier. The final paragraph is rather repetitive about the Russia/Ukraine conflict and does not really relate specifically enough to economic barriers. It does not mention development. There is some understanding of the question and some theory has been provided, but it is not accurate enough. Six marks are awarded.
