Question 3 Part	Marks awarded	Marks available	Comments
(a)	5	10	There is an understanding of the relevant theory, but it is not clearly explained with regards to the model of comparative advantage. There is also some attempt to identify limitations to the theory; so, there is an understanding of the specific demands of the question, but these are only partially addressed. The relevant theory is, therefore, also partly explained. The relevant terms are used appropriately, and appropriate diagrams have been included.
(b)	9	15	There is some understanding of the specific demands of the question, and the response shows an awareness of what a trading bloc is. However, the demands of the question are only partially met. The attempted synthesis is limited and lacks balance, although it is introduced in the context of a real-world example. An appropriate diagram is provided, but it lacks an explanation. The use of terminology is not precise enough, and the details on trading blocs are insufficient.
